

Stolen and Otherwise

No brilliant success in business is on record where the value of newspaper advertising was not recognized and employed with profit.

Don't worry if you meet opposition when you suggest improvements. No improvement was ever made that was not opposed by someone.

It is public spirit and enterprise that makes a town. Every dollar contributed for the purpose of pushing forward some public and worthy enterprise returns to the giver many fold.

The people of this city should make it an unbroken rule to patronize local merchants exclusively unless the commodity desired cannot be obtained in the city.

The Indiana professor who has developed a method of putting life into "inanimate objects" has been offered a lucrative salary as superintendent of a messenger service concern. This will test his theory.

A Pennsylvanian is organizing a society for lunatics. No doubt the member of the Pennsylvania legislature who refunded $200, drawn by mistake will be urged to become a charter member.

About the best thing that has happened to make Douglas doubly blessed is the discovery of artesian water, which insures permanency as a smelting and manufacturing city, and will result in orchards, farms and gardens being created.

If the practice is kept up of driving union men out of certain towns and non-union men out of other places a state of lawlessness will prevail all over the country. Such acts are dangerous to the welfare of the people, and weakens respect for law and order.

People who make practice of sending into the city for their supplies should never complain of hard times. The way to prevent hard times is to get all the money from abroad you can and keep it in your town. In other words patronize your local merchant.

Something more than the statistics which show that the per centage of illiterates is greater in Boston than in Chicago will be needed to shake Boston's faith in its own intellectual supremacy. But these statistics merely confirm for the rest of the world an opinion it has long held.

Estimates of the losses in values of stock in the last six months vary all the way from two to four billion dollars, but the properties they represent are worth rather more in real money now than they were before. Wall street feels poorer but uncle Sam does not.

A Smart Man in Limbo.

Back of the Miller get-rich-quick syndicate in New York was Colonel "Bob" Ammon, lawyer, Miller was a crook. He robbed the people. Ammon was a receiver of the stolen goods and so skilled in the law's technicalities that it never occurred to him that he, too, might occupy a felon's cell.

Other men committed crimes and Ammon pocketed dirty money in bunches. He held his head up. He let other men take the blame and the stiff sentences. "They will never get me," he figured. "I am the lawyer in the case. A lawyer can do almost anything if he is sharp—and I'm a fox, I am."

The bar in every city in every country is cursed with a few Bob Ammons. See how this one came out.

There has been a civic awakening in New York. There is more honest hatred for thieves, confidence men and tricksters in that great city than ever before. It has become possible to put millionaires in prison cells, to break crooks who have defied the law for years; juries are no longer afraid to be honest; men defy political grafters and refuse to be robbed and have been able to secure justice.

The other day the smart Mr. Ammon the big lawyer, who had all kinds of pulls, was arrested in connection with the Miller swindle. He was a receiver of stolen money. He didn't receive the actual bills that Miller stole, because Miller deposited the money in a bank and then transferred the account to Ammon. There was a technicality to delight the soul of Colonel Bob. He relied on it. "They can't get me, for

I'm too smart for them," he said. "I know just how far I can juggle with the law."

The jury never quailed when Colonel Ammon turned his hypnotic eye on them. He was no more to the judge on the bench than any other crook.

And he was convicted.

He relied on his technicality and the jury laughed at it, the court would not consider it, and Colonel Bob Ammon, party to one of the most notorious swindles that ever robbed the poor, is to wear a striped coat.

It doesn't pay to be too smart.—Exchange.

Let Him Alone.

As the Washington Post wisely says the best way to treat the negro question is to let him alone. The race that has to be coddled and nursed and pampered will never amount to a hill of beans. Whoever heard of the Normans the Anglo-Saxons, the Germans, the Italians, the French or the Spaniards requiring the special protection and chaperonage of another people. Sometimes these people have been underdog but they have always managed to fight their way to the top. The Saxons were conquered by the Normans, but during the centuries, they went about their ways, and today their character and influence are inextricably interwoven with English life and institutions. Ireland has been an unwilling partner in the British empire, yet in our own day we have seen an Irishman chief justice of Great Britain and another Irishman in command of her armies. The race that can not help itself to higher levels is not worth helping. The negro must be his own salvation or perish from the face of the earth. Japan has eloquently illustrated the truth of this remark, and so has mighty Russia, which once lived in the shadow of Poland.

El Paso Union Depot.

El Paso is to have an up to date union depot, one that the citizens and railroad companies will alike feel proud of. This fact was settled upon yesterday by the representatives of the various roads doing business here says the El Paso Herald, who met to perfect plans for the building of the depot. While it has been assured for several months that El Paso would finally get a union depot, the plans had not assumed a fixed state until yesterday's deliberations, when it was unanimously agreed among the railroad officials that El Paso is to have not only a union depot, but the finest one in the state of Texas or the entire southwest. It is to cost a quarter of a million of dollars, and will be a handsome structure, whose foundation will be built of limestone, with finishings of granite, while the walls will be mainly of compressed brick.

The Doctrine of Good Living.

Who doubts it? Certainly not the man on the train. He needs and should demand food that is properly cooked and daintily served. The Santa Fe provides the best of meals for those who journey. Its table d'hote service, 75 cents, is deservedly popular. Trains without dining cars reach meal stations at seasonable hours.
